It's been another hectic year here at the Rūnaka. We hope you enjoy the last issue of the newsletter for 2013. I think we can all say that a break will be well deserved and already the calendar is filling up for next year. We have been focused on improving the way we communicate with our members, including the redevelopment of our website www.puketeraki.co.nz, so please keep in touch and let us know if you want to be kept more informed of what we are up to. Ngā mihi o te wā me te Tau Hou!

Hui-a-Iwi, Arowhenua

We had an awesome time at Hui-a-iwi and the manaaki at Arowhenua was fantastic. One of the highlights of the day was to meet the leader of Amazon Watch, Atossa Soltani - she is a very humble and kind person. The kaupapa of this organisation which she founded is to work with indigenous peoples to protect the Amazon. While the plight of indigenous peoples worldwide is very similar in that we are all trying to stop exploitation of the environment and protect our 'earth mother,' Atossa's message was very clear - "do not give up protecting what you value."

Koa Whitau-Kean, Carolyn Campbell, Duane Brooking, Ranui Ryan and myself were privileged to joined Atossa and Te Marino on a hikoi and «walk in the footsteps of our tīpuna» to the Opihi Rock Art site. While sitting in the cave we learned lots about our taoka and both Amanda Symon and Sue Eddington (Waihao) from Te Ana Māori Rock Art really know their stuff and have a real passion for it! We also got a good dose of wairuataka with some quiet time to reflect on days gone by, and what life may have of been like for our tīpuna.

One of the stories that Atossa shared with us was about indigenous tribes in the Amazon rainforest that have never had contact with other peoples! We all enjoyed hearing about this and it is rather unique. To be in the company of such an amazing human being who is so passionate about protecting the planet was truly inspiring and we were raving about the experience for days afterwards!

Maori and Mining

Congratulations to Dr Katharina Ruckstuhl & Dr Lyn Carter regarding 'Māori & Mining' which is a multi-disciplinary study on how mining in New Zealand relates to and impacts on Māori - Iwi, hapū and whūnau. The book covers a myriad of topics: resource extraction issues (including fracking), Treaty of Waitangi issues and rights, legal rights and legislation covering mining in New Zealand, environmental and economic impacts, mātauranga Māori, and the mechanics of mining - both off shore and land-based. There is also information on how international indigenous peoples have responded to mining. The book is freely available on-line. <http://hdl.handle.net/10523/4362>

Rimu tree for the Runaka

The Runaka was recently able to secure a rimu tree that fell on Dunedin City Council land in Whare Flat, Dunedin. The Mayor of Dunedin, Dave Cull wrote to both Ōtākou Rūnaka and Kāti Huirapa Rūnaka to see who was interested in accessing and extracting the tree, which is mature and large! Ōtākou indicated that they did not have a use for it, so we sent in James York to have a look and he thought that the tree was worth removing. The timber of the rimu tree is beautiful and so we were blessed to be given this wonderful opportunity. While not a good carving timber, we will use it for the next stage of the marae interior development as well as other future building projects where the use of this type of wood is appropriate.

There is a possibility that we will have rimu for sale once we work out how much there is, in order to recoup some of the expenses incurred in removing the tree. A big thanks goes to the DCC for all their help with the red tape, and to James York for agreeing to take on this mammoth task!

Korako Edwards

Kai Tahu, Ngati Kahungunu.

Gifted and Talented Māori scholarship recipient Te Rauawa O Te Pahi 2013.
Recipient of Hands-on-Science Scholarship 2014.

In May and June 2013 Korako Edwards took part in Te Rauawa O Te Pahi at Ōtākou Marae involving students from southern NZ secondary schools in a marine research project at the University of Otago's Marine Studies Centre. Students worked in teams and were mentored to develop their science investigation and communication skills in a Māori world context.

Korako worked in a team studying spiny dog fish and reports back were supportive of Korako who worked well in the team and excelled in communicating his team's findings.

Rangitiratanga, Manaakitanga, Whānaukatanga and Kotahitanga were aspects that related to developing personal talents and thinking about future studies and careers and using the programme as a vessel to embark on a journey and bring the group together.

Korako is doing well in science at Otago Boys High School and has excellent grades. He is interested in improving the health of the environment and helping add to the health of his people. Korako received a school prize for being top in Māori in his year and is committed to further study next year.

Next year Korako will be at the University again as he was awarded a full scholarship for Hands-on Science which will take place 12-17th January 2014. 250 people will gather to study Science and Korako has been placed in the Zoology stream.

We wish Korako well in the Hands-On Science project. His Taua Mahana is very proud of him and his whānau are behind him as he journeys forward.

'Ehara te pae i te tawhiti rawa ki nga mea kei te reri.'

No horizon is too far for those properly prepared.

Defibrillators purchase

The Rūnaka has purchased two defibrillators, one which is kept at the marae and the other at the rūnaka office. The machines are there to help re-start a heart if somebody has an incident that requires CPR. Recent training by several members of the runaka means that we have the skills to make the best use of the defibrillators, in the event that somebody at the marae or old school complex becomes ill in this way. Please contact Justine at the office if you want to receive the training, so she can get hold of the relevant contact at the hospital.

Te awa koiea

Brinds Point, Puketeraki

On the coast between Seacliff and Puketeraki is a small urupā looking out from the point that is known as Brinds Point (or Brinns Point), named after the wife of a whaler Captain Brind. Mrs Brind would wait on the point with her spy glass for her husband's boat to come home.

The original name is Te awa koiea - the stream of the small shell fish - named for the small paua that can still be found at that place.

The people interred there are early whalers and settlers pre 1840s. Most are in unmarked graves, but two of the earlier people associated with whaling have head stones - Morere Wharu Te Kaiaraki, wife of John Edwin Roden-Thomson (a whaler) and their son, Edward.

Another head stone is for Mary and William Lloyd and one of their sons. There is also a head stone for the Wilson whānau. Kitti Wilson and Mary Lloyd were daughters of Morere and John.

The Lloyd whānau placed a stone cairn at the urupa to commemorate the Tipuna buried there who have unmarked graves. The urupa is with the Kāti Huirapa Cemetery trustees.

The whānau are indebted to Mr Denis O'Connell, a farmer who leases the whānau land. He has fenced the urupa and maintains the grass. It always looks nice when they visit.

The urupā is closed for burials and the last one was in 1940.

LEOTC UPDATE

Ko te mihi tuatahi ki te atua mo tenei tau pai. Ko te mihi tuarua ki nga mate kua weturangitia haere, haere, hoki atu ra kei tua i te arai, moe mai moe mai, moe mai ratou. Tenei te mihi nui kia koutou katoa te hunga ora kei raro i te maru o Rehua.

Wow! Where has the time gone this year? It seems like yesterday we were preparing for our first marae visits. We have come to the whakamutunga of another year of Te Reo Rakatahi ki Otago LEOTC programme and have had so many highlights. Over the course of 2013 we have welcomed close to 2300 tamariki from 26 different kura to the four marae in the rohe.

We have worked with a wide variety of ages and abilities this year old and young, able and disabled. A highlight was working with the Teachers of the deaf. The tutors learnt as much from the tamariki as the tamariki did from the tutors. It was awesome to see the reciprocal tikanga AKO being scaffolded and implemented. We are looking forward to summer time and getting to spend some more time out at Puketeraki as this seems to be the ideal time for schools to book.

The tutors have really worked hard this year to vary their workshops as some of the kura come every year and for some tutors they have run into the same tamariki three years in a row. This proved a bit tricky to get around but our tutors are of such a high calibre, it was always going to be a valuable and enriching experience. Needless to say, the tamariki always come away feeling connected to the marae and for a tutor it is humbling when tamariki you took last year remember your whole workshop. Teachers have even commented on the benefits the workshops have had to their own teaching of Te Reo Maori me ona Tikanga.

We have had a few snags with tangi and weather forcing us to cancel some visits but we are looking forward to re-accommodating those kura again in 2014, which is looking very promising as we are being inundated with schools keen to get onto the marae for terms one and two. More and more schools have been tapping into the LEOTC programme and through word of mouth and great reviews from HOD's and Principals, the LEOTC "BUZZ" has been growing experientially.

A big mihi needs to go out to those of us who work tirelessly behind the scenes and to the staff out at Kati Huirapa Runaka who make it possible for this programme to be offered to so many tamariki in the greater Otago region.

Tenei te mihi atu ki a koutou katoa. Be safe over the holiday period. Meri kirihimete me te tau hou Naku noa na, Kopua Waititi, LEOTC Co-ordinator

KI UTA KI TAI

From the Mountains to the Sea, 11-14 October 2013

In October of this year I accompanied my Māori and Indigenous Development class (MAOR310) to Karitane for a four day 'in the field' practicum experience. The practicum utilised a Karitane community initiative called 'volunteer week' that utilises the skills and energy of volunteers to work in various community projects. The volunteer week gave an opportunity for students to be placed within community-driven development projects that address the needs and aspirations of Kāti Huirapa and the Karitane community. These were the East Otago Taiapure (Iwi and local fisheries management); Hawksbury Lagoon Group working to enhance and protect the lagoon; and River Estuary Care Waikouaiti-Karitane. Students stayed at Puketeraki marae where Kāti Huirapa hosted them during the four day stay.

While there, they worked with Suzi Flack on projects that reflected Rūnaka cultural and conservation values, such as maintaining the marae pa harakeke. Other projects involved planting trees to regenerate habitat and environment around the edge of the Karitane river estuary; and planting and track maintenance at Hawkesbury lagoon. The students also worked with the University of Otago Marine scientists in monitoring the health and sustainability of the shellfish in the Karitane lagoon. At each site Kāti Huirapa and the community volunteers explained the history of the sites, and the importance of the areas and resources for the Rūnaka.

The Te Tumu Pacific Studies class led by Dr Michelle Schaaf, (PACI 310 Sino Pacifica: Pacific Bodies), joined the MAOR310 class during the week. The Pacific studies students were applying notions of healthy bodies/healthy minds by participating in the cultural and spiritual aspects of the volunteer week. A third group from University of Otago Physical Education department, led by Dr Anne-Marie Jackson, also participated as part of the Karitane Community Volunteer Week. The Karitane Volunteer Week allowed the students to explore the coastal and catchment areas and learn more about the history of the area. However it was not all work, and students were able to take part in activities such as waka ama paddling, traditional harakeke weaving and stand up paddle boarding. A big thanks to Brendon and Suzi for organising this. Apparently they were all tired, but really happy and still talking about the experience as a highlight of their University year. Several have offered to join future volunteer weeks while they are still living in Dunedin.
